

SOLVING THE LATE MYSTERY.

...and all guilt. He was placed in a crowd of newspaper reporters and spectators for identification. Hildebrandt, Fanning, of the "New York Herald," was called, and without a moment's hesitation he looked up and down the line on, stepped up to Bohmann, and tapping him on the shoulder exclaimed:

"That is the man who was in the hotel with the two young men on the Saturday night before they were found dead in bed."

Notwithstanding this evidence the prisoner again denied he had been in the hotel.

When the prisoner was taken to Police Headquarters by Detective Nelson he had $25 in money and an open-faced gold watch in his possession. He was never known to have a watch with him, and when this was found in his clothing it was more evidence to prove that he must have taken the articles from the two murdered boys.

In his pockets, tucked neatly away, was a book, the cover of which was a faded blue. This was the number of the book which Knop had. Slips of deposit money and a day order for Knop were also found in his possession.

He was again asked whether he admitted he was the man that was wanted, and again said he was not.

He was very positive, and although the evidence against him was so strong, he denied he had been in the hotel. He had been spending money at a lively rate, although he was out of employment.

This explains how he got money to go to his friends. He had taken part of his trunk as a valentine which initiated a convict. The form had on a ribbon attached to it the words "I am in the prison in a short while unless you kindly release me. Write to me at the prison, care of the warden, and I will be glad to hear from you. I am in the prison in a short while unless you kindly release me. Write to me at the prison, care of the warden, and I will be glad to hear from you."

GENY IS BETTER.

The Murderer of Pretty Madge York Quite Rational Now.

Guarded by Policemen to Prevent Escape or Suicide.

His Victim's Funeral Was Held at 4 O'Clock This Afternoon.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 21.—James R. Gentry, the murderer of Actress Madge York, is still alive, and the chances are that he will recover. It may be several weeks before he is sufficiently well to be removed from the German Hospital to a prison.

He passed a fairly good night, and at a breakfast of eggs and lamb chops this morning with apparent relief. He has not gone through any of his insane antics since he made his statement yesterday to Magistrate Milligan.

What little conversation he has held since indicates that his mind is perfectly rational. Two police officers are constantly on guard, not only to prevent his escape, but also to frustrate any attempt that might be made by Gentry at self-destruction. The most serious of Gentry's physical injuries is the broken rib, which penetrates the pleura. The wound permits air to enter underneath the skin and produces emphysema. The fracture of the skull is not serious.

There was a scene in the parlor of Joseph J. Early's undertaking establishment, Fifth and Spruce streets, last night, when the men who had been in the hotel on Saturday night, when the men who had been in the hotel on Saturday night, when the men who had been in the hotel on Saturday night.
